

ALABAMA REDEFINES THE GREAT OUTDOORS

From rivers bursting with biodiversity to forests peppered with waterfalls, Alabama is a natural wonderland

When it comes to exploring the great outdoors, there is no place quite like Alabama. With a range of scenic terrains to explore and rare species to spot, Alabama is the perfect place to soak up the wonders of the natural world.

For a breathtaking blend of beautiful scenery and ecological diversity, Alabama's Scenic River Trail is the perfect place to soak up the great outdoors. Explore 250,000 acres of waterways and woodlands via canoeing, kayaking, or floating campsites, or visit the stunning 5 Rivers Delta in Mobile Bay, dubbed "America's Amazon."

The Alabama Coastal Birding Trail is an off-the-beaten-path paradise for birders and outdoor enthusiasts alike. Located along the white-sand beaches of the Gulf Coast, the trail features six birding loops, each inhabited by different species of stunning coastal birds.

No trip to Alabama would be complete without a visit to Bankhead National Forest, known as "The Land of a Thousand Waterfalls." Swimming, fishing, hiking, and horseback riding can all be enjoyed here, or you can simply sit back and take in the views from one of the many scenic overlooks. The waterside wonders continue at Cahaba River, where visitors flock every May and June to get a glimpse of the rare Cahaba lily.
